Be it ordained by the Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council of the City of Bangor in City Council assembled.

SEC. 1. Whenever the Municipal Officers deem it necessary for public convenience or health that any public drain or common sewer shall be constructed, such officers shall, before proceeding to construct the same, direct the City Engineer to prepare for them a plan of the same, as also an estimate of the probable cost of its construction, and said Municipal Officers shall make a schedule of such lots or parcels of land as are to be specially benefited by such drain or sewer and estimate upon such lots or parcels of land such a total sum that should be assessed upon each lot or parcel of land not exceeding such benefit as they deem will be just and equitable towards defraying the cost of constructing and completing such drain or sewer, and also a schedule of such estimated assessment not to exceed three-fourths of the estimated cost thereof. And they shall appoint time and place for a hearing to regard to the construction of the same, and shall cause to be published in a printed notice of the intention to construct such drain or common sewer, to the owner of each lot or parcel of land to be assessed, as aforesaid, if known, and, if not, to the occupant thereof, with a statement of the estimate of assessment against him, and of the time and place of said meeting. And at said time and place said officers shall allow a reasonable time to hear all parties interested for and against the construction of said drain or sewer.

The Committee shall report to the City Council a report showing the amount assessed upon each lot or parcel of land, the location, number, or other distinguishing description of which shall be given, together with the name of the owner or owners thereof, if known, or if not, to include the occupant, and a profile description of such drain or sewer.

On Wednesday, the 24th day of May, 1876, at 11 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing Two Delegates to the National Republican Convention, to be held at Cincinnati, Wednesday, June 14th, 1876, and Two Alternate Delegates to the same Convention, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before said Convention.

Each City, Town and Plantation shall be entitled to one delegate, and for every twenty-five votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1875, one delegate, and for each fraction of forty votes one additional delegate.

Republican National Convention, 1876.

The next Union Republican National Convention for the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States will be held in the CITY OF CINCINNATI, on WEDNESDAY, THE FOURTEENTH DAY OF JUNE, 1876, at 12 o'clock noon, and consisted of delegates from each State equal to twice the number of its Senators and Representatives in Congress, and of two delegates from each organized Territory and the District of Columbia.

In calling the conventions for the election of delegates, the committees of the several States are recommended to invite all Republican electors, and all other voters, without regard to past political differences or present party affiliations, who are prepared to support Republican principles, and desire to promote friendly feelings and permanent harmony throughout the country by maintaining and enforcing all the constitutional rights of every citizen, including the full and free exercise of the right of suffrage without intimidation and without fraud, who are in favor of the continued prosecution of a thorough reform of all official dishonesty, and of an economical administration of the Government, and the honest, faithful and capable officers, who are in favor of making such reforms in government as experience may from time to time suggest, who are opposed to imperiling the credit of the nation by depreciating any of its obligations, and in favor of maintaining in every way the national faith and financial honor, who hold that the common school system is the nursery of American liberty, and should be maintained absolutely free from sectarian control, who believe that, for the promotion of these ends, the direction of the Government should continue to be confided to those who adhere to the principles of 1776, and support them as incorporated in the Constitution and the laws, and who are in favor of recognizing and strengthening the Union which cost the lives of National Unity in the Centennial Anniversary of the birth of the Republic.

WM. E. CHANDLER, Secretary,
Republican National Committee.

"A MAN WITH A HEAD."

The New York Herald has been interviewing Hon. Charles Francis Adams on the Presidential situation and its report opens thus:

"This is chaos."

"Grant has disintegrated everything."

"The country needs a man with a head on his shoulders."

Thus speaks the veteran Adams—Charles Francis—as the Herald correspondent waited on him to learn his views concerning the situation.

The correspondent then proceeded to interrogate the statesman as to his opinions of candidates. On the Democratic side he was inclined to give Tilden the preference, regarding him "not as a brand new man, but politic. Seymour he thought "too fascinating" and he had felt no confidence in him since his course during the New York riots. Hendricks he thought had little or no strength outside of his own locality. Turning to the Republican canvass the correspondent asked Mr. Adams what he thought was the preference of Massachusetts, which he replied

"I think well of Mr. Blaine, who is strong and has a head of his own. He would have the advantage of good counsellors, and if elected would doubtless see the necessity of discretion and sound, patriotic policy."

In reply to a direct query he spoke kindly of Mr. Conkling, with whom he was in Congress but said "he would not be so independent as Mr. Blaine. I think he would act more in concert with what nowadays are called rings." The only other candidate mentioned by him was Washburne of whom he said "I know of him tolerably well and regard him very favorably. It will be noticed that the distinguished liberal started out with the declaration that "what the country needs is a man with a head on his shoulders," and that he designates Mr. Blaine as filling the requirement—a man "who is strong and has a head of his own."

What will Sam Bowles say to this emphatic indorsement of Blaine by the Republican's perpetual first-choice for the Presidency?

MORE BRILLIANCY.

The world is indebted to the sagacious and brilliant political editor of the Commercial for the following exclusive information which appeared in its columns last evening:

The hewing out process is still going forward politely. The Kansas and Nebraska delegations to the Cincinnati Convention, which were elected as Blaine men, have slipped out from under him, and are now reported for Conkling.

The only trouble with the above paragraph is that the delegations to Cincinnati have not yet been elected in either Kansas or Nebraska, and that when they are chosen they will undoubtedly support Mr. Blaine. The delegates will be chosen in Kansas, at Topeka, May 24, and in Nebraska, at Fremont, June 1. But such a geckie as our contemporary is not to be hampered by such trifles as facts or dates.

An attempt is made in some quarters to make it appear that the attacks on Mr. Blaine proceed from friends of Mr. Bristow. We do not believe this is the case, though the vindictive spirit so deplorably common in our politics appears too much in the words of injudicious advocates of Mr. Bristow's claims.—Boston Globe.

The Globe should be a competent witness, for itself has been one of the most vindictive, disingenuous and sensational disseminators of aspersions upon Mr. Blaine. It can safely claim, however, that it has done him very little harm, although the common-sense of readers, rather than its own intent, is to be credited with that result.

Says the Springfield (Mass.) Union: "Nobody can tell what will turn up between now and June, but unless figures lie most horribly Mr. Blaine's chances for getting the nomination are, at this writing, about twice as good as those of any other candidate, and have greatly improved within a week."

For some reason the local Democratic organ did not give its readers the President's message in reply to the House, although it is generally regarded as a rather interesting document.

PIPER'S CONFESSION.

A despatch from Boston yesterday announced that the motion for a new trial for Thomas W. Piper had been withdrawn, in view of his confession of the deliberate murder not only of little Mabel Young, but also of Bridget Landergan in 1873, of which he was suspected, and of the nearly fatal assault upon Mary Tynce in 1874. The details are not yet published, but the Boston Globe gives the following outline

PIPER'S STORY AS REPORTED.

It is reported on excellent authority that yesterday noon, in conversation with a gentleman who had been admitted to see him, Piper began talking in a different tone from that which he has been accustomed to use in his interviews with visitors, and showed plainly that something of more than ordinary weight was on his mind. He exhibited evident signs of mental anguish and by degrees prepared his visitor for a statement of the utmost gravity. At last the confession came out that instead of being the innocent cause of Mabel Young's death, by an accident, as his visitor had all along believed he was in reality her cold-blooded murderer! The announcement filled the gentleman with horror, and he could hardly believe the evidence of his senses, but as he grew calmer he interrogated the prisoner on various points and drew from him a connected and full confession of the crime, which bears out the Government theory of the manner of its commission. But a more astounding communication was yet to come. The wretched prisoner, almost broken down with the mental ordeal he had undergone, and the decision to confess it at last, went on to state that in addition to murdering the innocent, lovely child, he had also coolly butchered the humble domestic, Bridget Landergan, more than two years ago, and had mangled and left for dead the helpless woman, Mary Tynan, whose recovery from her terrible injuries is deemed by the medical profession almost a miracle. Almost overcome with horror and surprise at the astounding stories he had heard, Piper's visitor sought to gain from him

THE GUILT TO HIS DREADFUL ACTS,

the person, if any existed, for the cruel butcheries he said he had perpetrated. On this point, the prisoner professed to be unable to give any answer, save that it must have been an uncontrollable impulse, an inexplicable thirst for blood and a savage delight in witnessing human suffering, which had actuated him. In this particular his statement bore a strong resemblance to the confession of Jesse Pomeroy, that he was possessed with a desire to take life which he could not resist and which could be ascribed to nothing short of diabolism or demoniacal possession. The gentleman next questioned him as to his reasons for so persistently and so variously lying about the matter, and was told that he did it to blind his counsel as well as the public generally, the wretched man well knowing that had the truth fully in the possession of his counsel, they would have refused to proceed with his defence and would have left him to bear the punishment of his crimes. "The explanation is readily reconcilable with Piper's conduct throughout and it explains not only his stories, but the action of his counsel, Mr. Edward P. Brown, who has zealously and honestly worked upon it, and has not only done his best to save the life of his client, but had impressed many people with a similar belief. This announcement of this confession by Piper, and the knowledge of his client's guilt, will of course, absolve Mr. Brown from any further efforts in his behalf, and will lead to the abandonment of the motion for a new trial, made in the Supreme Court on Saturday, and which was to have been argued by Mr. Brown before the Court this morning. Piper's physical condition is reported pitiable in the extreme as his visitor expresses it; the terrible mental suffering which he must have undergone, having reduced him almost to a skeleton, and left him in a weak and shattered condition. It will be strange, indeed, if the result of this disclosure be not also to cause the speedy execution of the death sentence upon Jesse Pomeroy, Piper's twin in fiendishness and criminality.

HIS NERVES HAVE GREATLY FAILED HIM UP,

REBEL SENTIMENT IN TEXAS

A telegram from Austin, Texas, to the Galveston News, has the following account of a meeting held there on the 29th ult., to hear speeches from the leading Democratic candidates for the United States Senate:

"There was a large attendance of members, open to conviction, to night at Representatives Hall, to hear Messrs. Hancock, Stockdale, Ireland and Coke. The first defended himself ably and convincingly from charges of enmity and hatred to Texas during the war. He depicted the attitude of parties North, and the necessity of caution. Stockdale followed, agreeing with Hancock as to the condition of the feeling North, and took position on the currency question. Judge Ireland took the stand to excuse himself from speaking, because of the impropriety of that thing. Gov. Coke followed, taking issue with Judge Hancock upon war matters, deprecating interference with Texas politics by Northern men, and charged upon his (Confederate) war record, which he would respect. (This word is so printed in the News, the context seems to require that it should be regret.) If the occasion should offer

"Hancock, Stockdale, and Ireland were unanimously applauded and Coke enthusiastically. Some of the friends of Coke think he went entirely too far, and that a verbatim report of his speech would make a good campaign document for Northern Republicans, was the remark of nearly every other man I talked with. Hancock's chances may not be improved owing to the feeling against Northern intervention in Texas matters worked up, but his real friends and admirers will stand by him the closer. If anybody is benefited, I think it will be Ireland or Stockdale."

Judge Hancock appears to have found it necessary to explain his army record, he having refused to swear allegiance to the Confederacy and having remained loyal to the Union; Coke was a Confederate, and expressed himself as reported in the foregoing. Since the meeting Coke has been elected to the United States Senate by the Legislature, the latter body being almost unanimously Democratic.

THE SCANDAL HUNT. The disgraceful expedients to which the Democrats have resorted in trying to fix some stain upon Secretary Robeson, have culminated in the following performance as reported by the special of the Boston Advertiser:

Benjamin H. Cheever, a veteran lobbyist, has been chased all over the country by detectives in the employ of the naval committee, and has been finally captured, brought here and examined. His testimony is guarded with the strictest secrecy, Mr. Cheever as well as all the committee, having been sworn to reveal nothing, and there has been afloat since yesterday morning rumor after rumor concerning the importance of his testimony. Various versions are given, but the most accurate seems to be that he stated to the committee that a certain man, whom he named, told him two years ago that another man, whose name he never knew, had heard another man, also unknown, say, that several persons, whom he could name if he was so disposed, knew positively that Mrs. Robeson, the wife of the Secretary, before her marriage had received $50,000 for influencing the Secretary, to transfer the foreign deposits of the Navy department from one banking firm to another. The committee has been examining Mrs. Robeson's bank account before her marriage, and, although she had a very comfortable balance, they find no trace of this fifty thousand dollars, and it is suggested that they go to digging in the back yard of the Robeson premises, as it might be buried there.

One of the largest audiences ever gathered in Brooklyn assembled last Thursday to hear Henry Ward Beecher lecture on "The Loss and Gain" for the benefit of the proposed Soldiers' Home. When Mr. Beecher came forward, he was greeted with long-continued and enthusiastic applause, accompanied with cheers and the waving of handkerchiefs. His efforts and those of Major Tanner, a crippled veteran, who presided, resulted in subscriptions amounting to $18,000.

WASHINGTON'S ABSENTEEISM.

The Hartford Courant prints the following letter from Gen. Washington, now in possession of a gentleman in that city. It was addressed to "Maj. General Knox, Philadelphia," and is marked "Private" in three places—once over the direction, once across the seal, and once on the first page under the date.

MOUNT VERNON, Oct. 11th, 1791.

[Private.]

MY DEAR SIR: I have been under a strange mistake with respect to the time appointed for the meeting of Congress—and a distressing one—inasmuch as I shall have but little time after my arrival in Philadelphia to receive and digest the thoughts which may have occurred to the heads of Departments, with those of my own, into proper form for communication, or recommendation. So strongly was it fixed in my mind that the last instead of the fourth Monday in this month was the day appointed for the meeting, that, as my return depended on Page's stage coach, it was not ordered to be at George Town until the 18th inst., nor should I (unless by accident) have discovered my mistake, had not Mr. Lear in a letter I received from him yesterday, (being under the like mistake) informed me of it. This being the case (tho' it is not probable it has happened to you) I thus request you to be prepared, according to the desires I made known to you before I left the city, against my return to it, which will be without a moment's delay that I can avoid after the measure is in my power to proceed. Being much hurried I have hardly time to look over what I have written, but if you understand my meaning it is enough. Sincerely and affectionately, I remain &c

G. WASHINGTON.

Maj. Genl. Knox.

MARYLAND.

The special Maryland correspondent of the New York Times says the recent Republican Convention was the strongest and most that the Republicans of Maryland have had since the war, and was notable for its enthusiasm as compared with previous conventions since 1866. The delegate and electoral tickets are made up of strong men, representing the best elements of Maryland Republicanism, and possessing the highest attributes of political wisdom and personal standing. Referring to the resolution directing the delegates to vote for Mr. Blaine so long as there is a reasonable hope for his nomination," the writer says "the defeat of Mr. Blaine at Cincinnati is a contingency that has not been contemplated by the delegates." He also says

"It is believed by the Republican leaders who controlled the convention to-day that they can make a combination with the reformers who seceded from the Democratic party last Fall, which will certainly carry the Second, Fifth and Sixth Congressional Districts, and run the Democratic nominee a close, and perhaps winning race for the electoral votes of the State."

BUSINESS PROSPECTS AND THE POLITICIANS. Business is improving, in this city under the influence of good weather and activity in the rural districts, and with the reopening of navigation, now near at hand, still further improvement is anticipated. The greatest drawback to the revival of the general trade and prosperity of the country now, is the mischievous course of the Democratic partisans in the House of Representatives at Washington in failing to pass needed legislation and in keeping up a general hullabaloo for the political sake of making party capital for the Presidential campaign. The only effect of this sort of thing is to keep public confidence unsettled and to make "a bad matter worse." It is time for the Democratic leaders to cry "halt" to the minions of their machine, if they have any wisdom left or any regard for the interests of the country at large. Partisan tactics are one thing—the popular welfare is another; and discreet politicians and wise statesmen cannot afford to indulge in perilous trifles in a time like the present. Chicago Journal.

All advisers agree in describing the lugubrious expression which settled upon the countenances of the House Democracy during the reading of the President's Message in reply to Blackburn's Impudence. The N. Y. Times correspondent says it completely took the starch out of the majority, and remarks:

The comments on the Democrats on the Message were amusing. One remarked: "First Clymer made a great mistake in the Belknap matter, then Caulfield brought Davenport and trouble upon the Democracy, next Springer gave Morton a chance to make a scene, and now Blackburn has exposed us to this deserved castigation." Reagan, of Texas, thinks the Message a proper and dignified reply to an improper outlay and valuable as a historical paper. Proctor, Thomas of Maryland, thinks the Democratic side deserves the rebuke as a privately administered let permitting the inquiry to be made. The resolution is conceded to have been an impertinent and improper one, which both parties should have united to suppress.

As if to afford the prompt confirmation of the views expressed by us yesterday morning concerning the animus of the attempts to create a diversion among New England delegates against Mr. Blaine, the Commercial copies an article from the N. Y. Sun, boasting of the design and sneering at Maine as a "little corner State." We should be sorry to have the N. Y. Sun or the Commercial speak favorably of our State.

The Boston Journal says: "Strangers in Washington ask to see "the man President Grant stepped on." They mean Blackburn.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

FORTY FOURTH CONGRESS—First Session

Senate

WASHINGTON May 8

The impeachment proceedings were resumed Mr Garland resumed his argument commenced Friday and said he should be as brief as possible, even if in the judgment of others he was tedious, he felt no temptation to make excitedly remarks

He began and quoted from Judge Story to show that impeachment was designed to protect the people against the lawless acts of public officers under the control of the people of the people The great object of impeachment was to exhibit a conspicuous example to prevent the recurrence of the offences in the future The design was not simply to inflict a penalty to disqualify merely for the sake of vengeance but it was that other officers might see the punishment and be warned from yielding to temptation in similar circumstances in the future that they should fall they would fall like Belknap never to rise again

Mr. Garland continued The framers of the Constitution were men who had seen their shoulders galled by the lash and intended that no man should be subjected to the same infliction they would not have stricken all the blows they would have stricken all the blows they could not have stricken all the blows they could not have stricken all the blows they could not

THE BABY.

BY GEORGE MACDONALD

Where did you come from, baby dear?
Out of the everywhere into the here.

Where did you get your eyes so blue?
Out of the sky as I came through.

What makes the light in them sparkle and dance?
Some of the starry spikes left in

Where did you get that little tear?
I found it waiting when I got here.

What makes your forehead so smooth and high?
A soft hand stroked it as I went by.

What makes your cheek like a warm white rose?
Something better than any one knows.

Whence that three cornered smile of bliss?
Three angels gave me at once a kiss.

Where did you get that yearly grief?
God spake, and it came out to him.

Where did you get those arms and hands?
Love made them fair into books and bands.

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things?
From the same box as the cherubs' wings.

How did they all just come to be you?
God thought right about me, and so I grew.

But how did you come to us, you dear?
God thought right of you, and so I am here.

GOOD MILCH COWS AN IMPORTANT ELEMENT IN DIARY FARMING.

At a meeting of the Connecticut State Board of Agriculture, at Woodstock, Ct., Mr. Webb of Hebron gave his reason why he preferred the Short-Horns as dairy stock to other breeds. He was of the opinion that the Short-Horn breed requires no more food for the production of a large quantity of milk and of a quality equally good, than other classes of animals he had in his herd. He had had considerable experience with Devons and high grade Devons, also with Ayrshires and high grade Ayrshires, and he was at present keeping among his other animals a grade Jersey. As the result of his experience he found that a cow giving a large quantity of milk will of course consume a larger quantity of food than one which is giving a small quantity, whether it be a Short-Horn, Devon, Ayrshire or Alderney. The feeds all like cows alike with grass and scanty food and extra feed.

He said he had one cow that gave 3,000 quarts of milk in ten months when she was five years old, and that cow was a thoroughbred Durham. Her milk was weighed after she calved, the first of December, and the first seven days in January she gave 52½ pounds of milk per day. The first seven days in May it was at the rate of 39 pounds, and from the 1st to 15th of June it was at the rate of a little over 30 pounds per day. This cow, he said, had been just dried off, but would soon come in milk again. Of course such a cow will consume a large amount of food. The next best cow to have, he thought, is a grade Ayrshire that will weigh 800 pounds less than the Short-Horn, but he could not see any perceptible difference in the amount of food consumed by these two cows. He could not see but that one will require just as much food as the other, and the Short-Horn will have from three to four hundred quarts of milk more a year than the Ayrshire, and the Short-Horn will also weigh nearly one-third more.

He said he had made observations, as they came in his way, and this is the result. The Short-Horns make as much milk from the same amount of food as the Devons, the Ayrshire or the Dutch, and he thinks they will make as much butter from the same food. Then they are easily kept in good health and if anything happens to one of these cows—if she goes dry or farrows, or loses a quarter of her bag—all we have to do is to milk what is left, take good care of her, give her extra food and turn her off in three, six or nine months, and she will bring the same price that butchers pay for Western steers.

Now let us make an estimate of the quantity of cheese that the milk of Mr Webb's cow would make in the ten months named. A quart of milk will measure, weighs 2 lbs 34 ounces; the 3,600 quarts then, would weigh 7,762 pounds, and it ten pounds of this milk makes a pound of cheese, we have her product amounting to 776 pounds, which at 11c. per pound the average price for best cheese factories, we have 88 her annual yield, $108 64. When we consider that the average of good herds in the dairy region is scarcely 400 pounds of cheese per cow, the difference between a good and an average cow will be readily seen. To make money at dairying, good dairy stock is an important element and one which is too often overlooked by the geopaldy of dairymen.

BROOM CORN CULTURE

We have a good many inquiries about the culture of broom corn, and having had a little experience with that crop, we gave a brief answer, but more for the purpose of calling out the more extended experience of others than for the value of our own.

Broom corn requires rich soil; bottom land is the best, and it should be free from grass as possible. The reason for choosing clean land will appear plain to a man who has raised a crop. The ground should be well ploughed and made perfectly fine with the harrow, then marked out with shallow marks, it to be planted by hand, so as not to get the seed too deep in the ground; but the best plan is to plant with a drill. The stalks must be as close as five or six inches, to prevent the straw from becoming too heavy. Of course it cannot be drilled with much regularity, but must be set out with the hoe to the right distance when small. It is like sorghum, grows slow while small, and on most land it is profitably necessary to hoe the grass out, which gives a good opportunity for cutting out to the right distance. After this is done, the cultivation is similar to that of corn. When the seed begins to fill, the straw will bend over from the weight, and to prevent this the full force of hands must be put in to break the stalks over, say ten or twelve inches from where the straw grows out, or more properly the head. The weight of the seed will then, by hanging down, keep the straw straight.

Now comes the busy season, and the time when labor and care will add much to the value of the crop. The green straw being altogether the most valuable, it is important that it be before it begins to turn red, and dried in the shade. To do this, a shed is necessary, with shelves on which to lay it, say six inches deep; and enough hands be employed to cut the crop before any or much of it turns red. The seed is stripped by means of a machine made for the purpose, with two cylinders between which the corn is held in handfuls. The process is very rapid, only an instant being necessary to knock the seed all off. The corn is baled before being sent to market. The price is very fluctuating, running from $60 to $250 per ton. We have seen new sod broken and drilled in every second furrow, which made a half ton to the acre, without cultivation.—Journal of Agriculture.

OPINIONS OF A JERSEY BREEDER.—A writer in the N. E. Homestead gives the opinion of T. W. Stoughton of Franklin Co., Mass., for twenty-five years a breeder of Jersey cattle as to the value of that breed. These opinions may be summarized as follows:

Jerseys are not especially desirable for beef, although the cows fatten readily when not in milk, and make a superior quality of beef. They are not remarkable for quantity of milk, but sometimes give twenty quarts per day. A good Jersey cow will give as many pounds of butter per week as she gives quarts of milk per day. They are not as hardy as native stock, but with good care there is no trouble in keeping them. The butter is hard and will bear transportation; is high colored and has a high flavor. A thoroughbred Jersey bull crossed upon native or Short-Horn stock is of the very best. The quantity of butter would be greatly increased, and the quality fully forty per cent. The Jerseys are sharp feeders and eat a good deal of feed in proportion to their size. The cows are precocious breeders. Grade Jerseys sell readily at an advance on the price of common cows. Grade two-year-old Jersey heifers not uncommonly make ten or twelve pounds of butter per week.

THOROUGHBRED SWINE VS. GRADES FOR PORK.—My own experience is that grade pigs, the product of a thoroughbred boar (of any breed) and the best common sows furnish a better quality of pork for eating and market than any thoroughbred (Berkshire, Essex or Suffolk) I have ever used. Even the higher grades do not yield as good pork with me, as the result of constant crossing on common sows—that is, good, fair sows. Is my experience exceptional?—PETER HAMILTON.

HOW NOT TO BE SWINDLED.—We clip an item from an exchange—which it will be well for farmers and others liable to be swindled by patent-rights men, venders of wonderful secrets, traveling agents, etc., to carefully read and duly heed. To avoid being swindled our contemporary suggests action upon these general principles:

"Never listen to any proposition which is commended to you as giving opportunities for making money dishonestly or by selling an article for much more than it is worth, the man who proposes to have you defraud others will cheat you if he has a good opportunity.—As a rule, when a stranger proposes to sell you an article at very much less than its value, it is safe to decline buying, unless you are a good judge of the article.—Never make a purchase or contract with a stranger when his assurance is the only evidence you have of value.—Never sign a paper presented by a stranger without reading it and being sure you understand its character.—As a rule avoid engaging in any enterprises, however attractive they may appear, if entirely outside your regular business.—Buy of and sell to men whom you know personally, or who are engaged in regular, permanent business, whenever this can be done.—Other things being equal, buy and sell in the market nearest home."

HOW TO OBTAIN CHOICE BUTTER.—We present the following brief summary of the leading or more essential requisites for the production of good butter.

I. Securing rich, clear, healthy milk—milk obtained from good cows, well cared for, kindly treated, grazed upon sweet and nutritious pasturage free of weeds, and provided with an abundance of clean, fresh water.

II. Drawing the milk from the cow in a cleanly manner and setting it in an untainted atmosphere and keeping it at a uniform temperature—about 60 Fah., while the cream is rising.

III. Skimming at the proper time and before the milk becomes old and bitter or is decomposed.

IV. Proper management in churning.

V. Washing out the butermilk thoroughly and working the butter so as not to injure its grain.

VI. Thorough and even incorporation of pure salt and putting down in tight, clean, well made packages—packages that will exclude, as far as possible, the admission of air.

VII. Placing the butter after it is packed (if not sent at once to market) in a clean, cool, well ventilated cellar—one that is moderately dry and absolute free from all impurities and offensive odors.

VIII. Cleanliness in all the operations from the time the milk is drawn to the packing and marketing the butter is of imperative necessity. Judgment and experience in manipulating the cream and working the butter must, of course, be an element that is not to be overlooked or dispensed with.

Look out for the catterpillars on the apple trees, unless you take pride in seeing an orchard all festooned with their nests.

Keep a sharp eye on the cattle. Study their habits, their wants, and their comfort. Didn't you better buy out far more trouble and mangolds than you raised, but you? you can't prepare the land too well for root crops.

Sow corn or some other crop for soiling. The pastures will be getting short by and by, and the cows need a little extra feed to keep up the milk.

If you want to see the barn well filled in the fall you'd better spring round now, nature is trying to do her best at the way of growth, take hold and help.

Survey the state of your fences, and fully repair all defects before you turn your cattle out to graze. Don't be in a hurry to turn the cattle out. Let the pasture get a good start.

Give particular attention to shades and water courses, and turn as much of the wash of the highway as possible over your land.

Who would be without celery and lettuce, rhubarb and asparagus? Who would be without strawberries, cherries and currants when it is so easy to raise them? Now is the time to think of these things.

It is better to shear sheep early and without washing; but let them in at the weather is cold and chilly.

In sowing garden seeds it is well to remember that though the soil should be deep and finely pulverized, a loose condition is unfavorable to growth. After the seeds are sown a heavy rolling would be a great advantage.

LETTER CARRIERS.

All letters are delivered free by carriers where address is on street and number. People should form their correspondents of above and have letters addressed in full. All Persons having their address at the General Delivery can also have the letters sent, but it is much more convenient to have the street and number, and they will be delivered earlier than the same by call on at the office. Carriers do not deliver on Sunday, the last trip supplying the extreme of their routes.

Collections are made morning and evening on week day for important mails—the down town boxes (Blue) at the Post Office, thirty minutes before closing to mail at the office.

Holidays, the Carriers' Window will be open for the delivery of letters from 8½ to 9½ A. M. and from 7½ to 8½ P. M. Sundays, 9½ to 10½ A. M.

Any irregularities in the Carriers' department should be reported to the office.
